CLUB NEWS

Gallery at Greencroft

Featuring: Paul Stams

Paul is a photo artist. His roots are in NYC where he was influenced by visiting art museums with his mother. His favorite artists were Salvadore Dali, Henri Magritte and Frida Kalo.

In his 20s, Paul was teaching in New York City and through a friend, photographer William Lulow, he developed an interest in photography. Working in black and white in a small darkroom he set up in a second bathroom, he soon became enamored with creating montages by blending photographs.

Professional and family life precluded this artistic pursuit for about 30 years. When he retired from teaching, relocating to Charlottesville, Virginia, he returned to his love of creating art through photography. The development of digital photography applications such as Lightroom, Photoshop and On One Photo RAW provided the necessary tools.

Paul began working on a project he called Photo-Synthesis in which images of a seemingly disparate nature were printed as one image. He entered art shows and was awarded prizes and awards for his work.

Paul then began to blend photos rather than just placing them next to or overlapping each other. These works are photo montages, creating the image as a painter would create their images. "Painting with Photographs" as a fellow photographer pointed out.

Artist's Statement:

I love art and making photographs. I have found a way to express both in one image by layering and blending photographs creating a PhotoMontage.

These images when printed, demonstrate what I see and feel as though I am painting with photos. Sometimes the images are surreal, sometimes not. Often, they are a blend of what I experience while I am out with my camera... Disparate images that fuse well and manifest a visceral reaction in me.
